Trailblazer: Negro Nurse in the American Red Cross: Jean ...

Hailed as the first Black public health nurse admitted into the American Red Cross Town and Country in 1917, the author acknowledges the racial bias and barriers Davis and other Black nurses experienced throughout the first half of the twentieth century.

TRAILBLAZER: Negro Nurse in the American Red Cross by Jean ...

A completely uncritical biography of Frances Elliott Davis, a ""quadroon"" whose relatively light coloring and impeccable credentials enabled her to integrate the Red Cross nursing staff in 1916. The ""Trailblazer"" designation suggests a misleading degree of initiative because the Red Cross staff was equally interested at the time, intending blacks to serve their own (in North Carolina, but ...
